Song of the Sea Turtle.

"The love of the Turtle."-Byron.

In a sunny land, by a beach of sand,

Where grows the cocoa tree;
I, a Turtle was born in a shiny morn,
By the side of a rolling sea—
Whose bubbling was wont to lave

Dying away in a soapy spray

The shore to the mountain's feet,

Where wild birds came with plumage of flame

While cooed aloud 'mongst the plumaged crowd
My kinsman, the Turtle Dove;
The paroquet—I can see him yet—

While the parrot talked, and the parrot-toed walked,

By the monkey's cool retreat;

And sang in the boughs above ;

Wore gaily his coat of green;

Complacently viewing the scene;

The clambering vine did strive to entwine The tree at the edge of the surf—

While the wild deer grazed the turf— Beneath the shade the lizard made

Slided on-and we heard him not;

Whose rustling made in the constant "trade,"

Prowled in search of his prey, But his dorsal fin showed the place he was in,

Like a boat's sail over the bay.

In a strange assorted troop— Where suckers come in to imbibe their rum,

In this dusty street, where people meet with the hostile chiefs in unremitted efforts to dissuade them from their blood-thirsty resolution. From an exceedingly interesting daily journal of that re-markable canoe expedition along the hunting grounds of untameable savages, kept by Mr. Trowbridge, we copy an entry made on the morning after the expected attack. In speaking of the friendly interference of Mrs. Johnson the diary says: "This influence and the courage that never knew fear on the part of our chief has saved probably hundreds of lives, and given us peaceable entrance to a country whose territory skirts an inland sea co-extensive with the Baltic, and which must before long be added by cession to the millions upon millions of acres already composing Uncle Sam's farm." We should have before mentioned that on the following afternoon a council was held, the amende honorable made, and the treaty signed.

Personalities of Literati.

JERROLD. Douglas Jerrold, a well known contributor to Punch, and editor of various publications, is a man of about fifty years of age, and in person is remarkably spare and diminutive. His face is sharp and angular, and his eye of a grayish hue. He is probably one of the most caustic writers of the age, and with keen sensibility he often writes, under the impulse of the moment, articles which his cooler judgment condemns. Although a believer in hydropathy, his habits do not conform to the internal application of Adam's ale.
